SIX STEPS TOWARD THE FUTURE IN 2006

Each year, the Libraries work toward the future by identifying a handful of library-wide priority objectives that we believe will move us closer to our strategic vision. In 2005-2006, the Libraries took six steps toward realizing our “Strategic Plan 2010” by accomplishing the following:

1. External Reviews. The Regional Campus Libraries, the Dodd Research Center, Information Technology Services and Access Services retained outside consultants this year to conduct area assessments and identify new staff skills and competencies needed to position the Libraries for the future.

2. WebCT Vista. The Libraries worked with the Institute for Teaching and Learning and University Information Technology Services staff to develop a Library Resource Tool to incorporate electronic course reserves into WebCT Vista, UConn’s upgraded course management software.

3. Electronic Resource Management. Library staff created a database in accordance with Digital Library Federation guidelines to manage the University’s growing investment in electronic resources. Staff also input holdings data into the database and began a procurement process to potentially purchase one of the commercial electronic resource management software products currently available.

4. Copyright Guidelines. Working with the Attorney General’s Office and others, the Libraries Copyright Team developed the first draft of copyright guidelines for the UConn community in the new digital library environment. The Libraries also co-sponsored a public forum “Whose Rights and Who’s Right: Copyright in the Digital Age” with the Provost’s Library Advisory Committee.

5. Technology Learning Center. In collaboration with the Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education, a Learning Resource Center opened on Level 1 of Babbidge Library to assist UConn students with various issues related to using technology in coursework and for administrative functions like WebCT and PeopleSoft.

6. Institutional Repository. The Libraries completed the Digital Commons@UConn pilot project and purchased Proquest’s remotely hosted software. UConn dissertations, center and institute papers, senior honors theses and other campus publications are now offered through this institutional repository.

The Libraries accomplished these objectives while facing a challenging financial climate in Fiscal Year 2006. It is truly the Library staff’s hard work on all the UConn campuses that moves us further ahead in developing new electronic information services and positions us for the future while continuing to offer excellent facilities and strong print collections.
